THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1819.

From the Richmond Compiler.

THE OLDEN TIME.

We have been favored with a curious volume, the only copy perhaps in Virginia except the one owned by Mr. Jefferson, entitled "The Generall Historie of Virginia, New-England and the Summer Isles; with the names of the Adventurers Planters and Governours from their first beginning, An. 1584 to this present 1626, &c. &c. &c. By Captaine Smith sometymes Governour in those countryes and Admiral of New England. London, printed 1632." The reader will immediately perceive that this is the celebrated work, partly written by the famous Smith, which gives the description of the first settlement of Virginia, the building of James Town, the manners and customs of the North American Indians—The adventures of Smith are amongst the most extraordinary upon record They approach almost to romance. His intercourse with Powhatan, and his high minded daughter Pochahontas, have indeed been wrought up into a very pretty tale.

The Indians present a most interesting spectacle at this period—"The forme of their commonwealth is a monarchicall government; one as emperour ruleth ouer many kings or governours. Their chiefe ruler is called Powhatan and taketh his name of his principall place of dwelling called Powhatan." At Werowcomoco, says Smith, on the right side of the river Pamaonkee, was his residence, when I was delivered him prisoner, some 14 myles from James Towne, where for the most part he was resident, but at last he took so little pleasure in our neare neighborhood, that he retired himselt to Orapakes, in the desert between Chickamania and Youghtanund." (Pamunkey)—From another passage it appears, that the town of Powhatan was situated about a mile below the falls of Powhatan, the present seat of William Mayo, Esq. about a mile below this city, near to the river. There is a rising ground at the present Powhatan, hemmed in on one side by a steep precipice, and susceptable of being strongly defended—which may have been the site of the "salvage forts" spoken of by Smith in these terms:—"the rest be seated gallantly at Powhatan, in that salvage fort, readie built, and prettily fortified with poles and barks of trees, sufficient to have defended them from all the salvages in Virginia—no place we knew so strong, so pleasant and delightfull in Virginia, for which we call it Nonsuch."

Wishing to furnish our readers with some specimen of the style and orthography of this curious volume, we have selected a passage relating principally to Pochahontas—It is well known, that she was the daughter of Powhatan; that she married Mr. John Rolfe, an Englishman, from which marriage some families in Virginia are descended; and that with her husband she went to England. The following is the interesting piece of composition we lay before our readers.

"Before she arrived at London, Captaine Smith to deserue her former courtesies, made her qualities knowne to the Queenes most excellent Maiestie and her court, and writ a little booke to this effect to the Queene: An abstract whereof follows.

To the most high and vertuous Princesse Queene Anne of Great Britannie.

"Most admired Queene—The loue I beare my God, my king and countrie, hath so oft emboldened mee in the worste of extreme dangers, that now honestie doth constraine me presume thus farre beyond my selfe, to present your maiestie this short discourse: if ingratitude be a deadly poyson to all honest vertues, I must be guiltie of that crime if I should omit any means to be thankfull. So it is.

"That some ten yeeres agoe being in Virginia, and taken prisoner by the power of Powhatan their chiefe king, I receiued from this great saluage exceeding great courtisie, especially from his sonne Nataquas, the most manliest, comliest, boldest spirit, I euer saw in a saluage, and his sister Pocahontas, the king's most dear and well beloued daugbter, being but a childe of twelue or thirteene yeeres of age, whose compassionate pitiful heart, of my desperate estate, gaue me much cause to respect her; I being the first christian this proud king and his grim attendants ever saw; and thus inthralled in their barbarous power. I cannot say I felt the least occasion of want that was in the power of those my mortal foes to preuent notwithstanding all their threats. After some six weeks sitting amongst those saluage courtiers, at the minute of my execution, she hazarded the beating out of her owne braines to saue mine, and got only tha but so preuailed with her father, that I was safely conducted to Iames towne, where I found about eight and thirtie miserable poore and sicke creatures, to keep possession of all those large territories of Virginia, such was the weaknesse of this poore commonwealth, as had the salvages not fed us, we directly had starued.

"And this reliefe, most gracious Queene, was commonly brought vs by this lady Pocahontas, notwithstanding all these passages, when inconstant fortune turned our peace to warre, this tender virgin would still not spare to dare to visit vs, and by her our iarres haue beene oft appeased, and our wants still supplied; were it the policie of her father, thus to imploy her, or the ordinance of God thus to make her his instrument, or her extraordinarie affection to our nation, I know not; but of this I am sure; when her father with the vtmost policie and power, sought to surprize mee, hauing but eighteene with mee, the darke night could not affright her from comming through the irksome woods, and with watered eies gaue me intelligence, with her best aduice to escape his furie; which had bee known, hee had surely slaine her. Iames towne with her wilde traine she as freely frequented, as her fathers habitation; and during the time of two or three yeeres, she next vnder God was still the instrument to preserue this colonie from death, famine and vtter confusion, which if in those times had been dissolued, Virginia might haue line as it was at our first arriual to this day. Since then this business hauing beene turned and varied by many accidents from that I left it at; it is most certaine, after a long and troublesome warre after my departure, betwixt her father and our colonie, all which time she was not heard of; about two yeeres after she her selfe was taken prisoner, being so detained neere two yeeres longer; the colonie by that means was relieued, peace concluded, and at last reiecting her barbarous condition, was married to an English genileman, with whom at this present she is in England; the first christian ever of that nation, the first Virginian euer spake in English, or had a childe in marriage by an Englishman, a matter surely, if my meaning bee truly considered and well vnderstood, worthy a princees vnderstanding.

"Thus most gracious Lady, I haue related to your Maiestie, what at your best leasure our approued histories will account you at large, and done in the time of your Maiesties life, & howeur this might be presented you from a more worthy pen. it cannot from a more honest heart: as yet I neur begged any thing of the state, or any, and it is my want of abilitie and her exceeding desert, your birth, means and authoritie, hir birth vertue, want of simplicitie, doth make mee thus bold, to beseech your Maiestie to take this knowledge of her, though it be from one so unworthy to be the reporter, as my selfe, her husbands estate not being able to make her fit to attend your Maiestie: the most and least I can do, is to tell you this, because none so oft hath tried it as myselfe, and the rather being of so great a spirit, how euer her stature: if she should not be well receiued, seeing this kingdome may rightly haue a kingdome by her meanes: her present loue to vs and Christianitie, might turn to such scorne and furie, as to diuerte all this good to the worst of euill, where finding so great a Queene should doe her some honor more than she can imagine, for being so kind to your seruants and subjects would so rauish her with content, as endeare her dearest bloud to effect that your Maiestie and all the kings honest subjects most earnestly desire. And so I humbly kisse your gracious hands."

"Being about this time preparing to set saile for New-England, I could not stay to doe her that seruice I desired, and shee well deserued: but hearing shee was at Bronford with diuers of my friends, I went to see her: After a modest salutation, without any word, she turned about obscured her face, as not seeming well contented; and and in that humour her husband, with diuers others, we all left her two or three houres, repenting my selfe to have writ she could speake English. But not long after, she began to talk; and remembered mee well what courtesies she had done; saying, You did promise Powhatan what was yours should bee his, and he the like to you; called him father, being in his land a stranger, and by the same reason must I do you: which though I have excused, I durst not allow of that title, because she was a king's daughter; with a well set countenance, she said, Were you not afraid to come into my fathers countrie, and caused feare in him and all his people (but mee) and feare you here I should call you father; I tell you then I will, and you shall call me childe, and so I will be for euer and euer your countrieman. They did tell vs alwaies you were dead, and I knew no other till I came to Plimoth: yet Powhatan did command Vttamatokkin to seek you, and know the truth, because your countriemen will lie much.

"This Salvage one of Powhatan's councell, being amongst them, held an vnderstanding fellow; the king purposely sent him, as they say, to number the people here, and informe him well what wee were and our state. Arriuing at Plimoth, according to his directions, he got a long sticke, whereon by notches he did think to haue kept the number of all the men he could see; but he was quickly wearie of that task: Coming to London where by chance I met him, hauing renewed or acquaintance, where many were desirous to heare and see his behaviour, hee told mee Powhatan did bid him to finde me out, to show him our God, the king, queene and prince, I so much had told them of: Concerning God, I told him the best I could, the king I heard he had seene, and the rest hee should see when he would, he denied euer to haue seen the king, till by circumstances he was satisfied he had: Then he replied very sadly, You gaue Powhatan a white dog, which Powhatan fed as himself, but your king gaue me nothing, and I am better than your white dog.

"The small time I staid in London, diuers courtiers and others, my acquaintances, hath gone with me to see her, that generally concluded, they did thinke God had a great hand in her conuersion, and they have seene many English Ladies worse fauored, proportioned and behauored, and as since I haue heard, it pleased both king and queenes Maiestie honorably to esteem her, accompanied with that honorable Lady the lady De la Ware, & that honorable lord her husband, and diuers other persons of good qualities, both publikely at the maskes and otherwise, to her great satisfaction and content which doubtless she would have deserued, had she liued to arriue on Virginia."

There is some idea of attempting to republish in this state this venerable volume the authentick record of the earliest and most interesting transactions of Virginia—the book is completely out of print.

SAMPSON'S REPORT.

A report of the case of Maurice vs. Judd, relative to the inspection of fish oil, which was lately tried in the Mayor's court, and gave rise to the curious question, whether a whale is a fish, has just been published by Van Winkle, as reported by Mr. Sampson. The examination of the witnesses on this occasion, gave rise to a good deal of humour at the trial, and much profound learning, it seems, was displayed both by Dr. Mitchill and counsellor Sampson on this occasion, so that the court and jury were almost as much puzzled as in the famous case of Westerlo, in which the question was whether a black man could be the father of a white child; and in which the learned doctor was in the affirmative.

Capt. Preserve Fish having stated in his evidence, that all fish have perpendicular tails, but that the whale tribe have them in a horizontal position, Dr. Mitchill observed, that if whales and flounders could go upon their edge, they would have their fins in the same position as the rest of the finny tribe.

Question by Sampson to Dr. Mitchill:

"Q. They would, nevertheless, if they took the fancy to play the antic in that manner, astonish the other natives of the deep, as they would present two sides of two different colours, a white and a brown; as captain Fish might say the starboard side white and the larboard side mud colour. And how would their eyes appear? Would they not have a little of a squint?

"A. It is true the two eyes would be on the one side.

"Q. Then the white side would see nothing, and some designing fish would take them by the blind side?"

The following was also put to the same witness:

"Q. If, then, they are provided with hands and arms, it is natural to expect fingers and thumbs. How is it as to the carpus, metecarpus, and phalanges; are they present; if so, could they use them for ordinary purposes, as to thread a needle, or do this? (taking a pinch of snuff.)

"The witness, after some consideration, observed that these extremities were covered with a membrance or web.

"Q. Like people that wear mittens. No wonder they are awkward, and all their fingers like thumbs, as the saying goes?

"A. Their arms are, nevertheless, pretty fully developed, and in one of the cetaceous kind called the manati, so much as to enable it to take its baby, in its arms and carry it on shore, thus, (using a significant gesture.) The females of this family wear whiskers.

"Q. She is then sometimes a wet nurse and sometimes a dry nurse, or an amphibious nurse; in zoology, the whiskered lady."

The learned doct. being asked his opinion about the kraken, said that one writer had described it a mile and a half in diameter, but that Plinny gives it only 4 acres of extent: that the whale feeds upon it: and that a hungry whale has been known to bite off one of its huge paws, as large as the mast of a ship, and make a meal of it.

The readers of this report will be much amused by the "keen encounter of the wits" of the learned doctor and the no less learned counsellor, in solving this profound problem. The following is a specimen of Mr. Sampson's drollery:

"When it is considered that our waters abound with the dolphins, so inclined by nature to aid and succor us, that the larger kinds are only banished by our cruelty from our shores; and seeing it is well attested that their milk resembles that of cows, with the addition of cream (see Dr. Brewster's Cyclop, article Cetology,) would it not be worthy the wisdom of our statistical, agricultural, and economical societies, to turn their attention to this weighty consideration, whether these creatures might not by good treatment be induced to lend their aid to the navigation of our waters, and to furnish us in return for our hospitality with abundance of nutrition? How far they may be used in our great canals, where there is none but fresh water, may be a question; but there is no reason, provided the overslaugh can be deepened, why judges and lawyers, legislators and politicians, office-hunters and lobby-members, may not, before many years, in their attendance upon the terms, enjoy the advantage of a conveyance upon a whale's back, infinitely surpassing the speed of the steam-boat; and the shores of the Wallabout may resound with the music which calls the dolphins to be milked, and be studded with villas where the citizens shall repair to enjoy country air and dolphin's whey. The bay of Gowanes seems designed by nature for the reception of the whales; from them will be derived a rich supply of butter and cheese for home consumption and foreign commerce. Another important acquisition will be the defence and safety of our harbor. If one of Claudius's gallies was swamped by a single whale, overpowered and stranded as it was, what would the fire of a three-decker, or a phlogobombos, avail against an inundation from the snouts of three hundred well disciplined whales? It is evident, that the use of fire engines will be superseded.

"If this appear visionary, it should be remembered how the steam-boat was, till its completion, a subject of derision to the incredulous."

PUNISHMENT OF INGRATITUDE.

A French writer relates the following remarkable instance of the punishment of ingratitude in children.—An eminent trader at Lyons, who had acquired an easy fortune, had two handsome daughters, between whom, on their marriage, he divided all his property, on condition that he should pass the summer with the one, and the winter with the other. Before the end of the first year, he found sufficient ground to conclude that he was not a very acceptable guest to either; of which, he however took no notice, but hired a handsome lodging, in which he resided a few weeks.—He then applied to a friend and told him the truth of the matter, desiring the gift of two hundred livres, and the loan of fifty thousand in ready money for a few hours; his friend very readily complied with this request; and the next day the old gentleman made a splendid entertainment, to which his daughters and their husbands were invited. Just as dinner was over, his friend came in a great hurry, told him of an unexpected demand upon him, and desired to know whether he could lend him 50,000 livres. The old man told him without any emotion that twice as much was at his service, if he had wanted it; and going into the next room, brought him the money.—After this he was not suffered to stay any longer in lodgings; his daughters were jealous, if he remained a day more in one house than the other; and after three or four years spent with them, he died; when upon examining his cabinet, instead of the livres, there was found a note containing these words:—"He who has suffered by his virtues has a right to avail himself of the vices of those by whom he has been injured; and a father ought never to be so fond of his children as to forget what is due to himself."

ALEXANDRIA:
THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1819.

If a profound political philosopher were to be asked what part of its system was the most indispensably necessary to the preservation in its greatest purity of a free state, he would no doubt reply, a pure and well appointed judiciary, with the judges rendered perfectly independent. In ancient Greece and in Rome they took the best security practicable in such systems as theirs, against the corruptions of the courts of justice, by having all suits and processes discussed and determined in public. To be unjust in a situation where the auditory consisted of a whole people, who could observe the slightest action, and censure the least improper word, was no doubt difficult—but many people have questioned whether by the avoiding of one evil, they did not run into another, and whether they did not in some cases, do more mischief by subjecting their proceedings to the capricious animadversions of a misjudging, captious multitude, than in others they did good by an inquisition so public. Certainly the latter did not always secure the people against tyranny and corruption; for the Decemvir Appius audaciously bullied the whole nation, and did neither scruple nor fear to commit open injustice.

We may safely infer, however, that the public discussion of causes is one of the best modes of securing justice in the determination of suits—our own courts, and those of the country from which our jurisprudence is taken, and the acknowledged character of the decisions of which for such a number of centuries, afford incontestible proofs of it—and the sedulous care with which the greatest judges—even some of the highest prerogative men on the British bench—have guarded against every thing that tended to secrecy in the proceedings of courts of justice, are all so many proofs beyond controversy in favor of the utmost publicity.

A remarkable instance of this occurred on the trial of the dutchess of Kingston, for bigamy. This lady being the wife of a peer of the realm, was consequently tried before the house of lords. All the peers of England were her judges, under the direction of the lord high steward, named for that purpose by the king, his dignity ending with the trial. The theatre of this grand scene was Westminster Hall, whose spacious enclosure was not sufficient for the crowd of spectators. The principal evidence on the side of the dutchess, was a bed-ridden old man, whom it was impossible to carry out of his chamber. However, the deposition of this man was so favorable to the dutchess, that it was indispensably necessary towards the gaining of her cause. What was to be done? She demanded of her judges, that they would please to appoint a judicial deputation to receive his testimony at his own house.—This was a favor indeed, unknown in England—but yet it appeared so equitable to a number of the peers, that they were about to make a decree for that purpose.

The earl of Mansfield, however—then lord chief justice of England—a man, who to the eloquence of Cicero, united the most profound knowledge of the laws of his country—perceiving the intention of the house, rose from his seat. After having informed them that it was his wish to allow to the accused, all proper means of justification, he painted in the most lively colors the prejudicial consequences of such an illegal favor; he observed that a precedent like this, the authority of which was always so powerful in English courts of law, might thereafter induce, and even oblige them to consent to similar demands; that in all processes of great importance, there were sick witnesses, he said, who wished to be privately examined; and would it not be easy, he added, to deceive or seduce a small number of men entrusted with such a commission, or even, perhaps, to procure the election to fall on a chosen few? He ended by saying that such an innovation would open the door to venality and seduction; that it would give a mortal stroke to the national liberty; that it would endanger the right of property, so sacred in Great Britain, and even the lives of their fellow citizens.

To comprehend the full force of his reasoning, it is sufficient to observe, that, in all the courts of justice, the sentence almost entirely depends on the depositions of witnesses, and that the oral testimony of one single evidence is of more avail than a thousand documents. The speech of lord Mansfield made the most lively impression on his audience. Those of the peers who were the most zealous friends of the dutchess, immediately desisted from their demand, and her eloquent defenders became silent.

Valuable Land for Sale.

THE subscriber will sell at private sale the tract of land on which he lives, containing about 1500 Acres.

It joins the town of Warrenton, the seat of justice for Fauquier county—It is 42 miles from Alexandria, the city of Washington and Georgetown; 40 from Fredericksburg; and 45 from Winchester. This estate, in a neighborhood celebrated for health and good water, is well adapted to grazing and to the growth of corn and wheat. The turnpike road leading from Alexandria to Warrenton is finished, with the exception of seven miles. The improvements are a two story HOUSE, about fifty feet long, in the suburbs of Warrenton; two houses for overseers; a large barn, stables, and every necessary house for a farm. On the property are three good apple orchards, and a variety of other fruit trees. This tract is now divided into two farms—each of which has a superabundance of wood, and is laid off into six fields under good fences, with running water in every field. I believe there is a sufficiency of stone on the land to enclose the whole tract. Both farms have been under a course of clover and plaster for several years, by which they have been much improved, as the plaster acts with very great effect. The subscriber will divide the tract to suit purchasers. The terms are one third down, with an accommodating credit on the balance, if he sells a part; but only one fourth if the purchaser buys the whole tract, together with the stock of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, the farming utensils of every description, and all the provision that may be on hand for the support of the farm.

Shad and Herrings

CAN be had, in any reasonable quantities, and at moderate prices, at the

White-House Fishery

of the Belvoir estate, on the river Potomac; and persons from the country, as well as water customers, are invited to that shore, where they may expect the best treatment, and every facility, in getting such supplies as they need, which that well known fishery, and the utmost attention of the subscriber, can afford. Having been long experienced in that business on the Delaware river, and having taken the fishery for several seasons, he has caused a complete outfit to be made, not only for taking Shad, as heretofore, but Herrings, of which it is well known that almost any number may be caught at that shore, when the gluts are in the river. A very complete and commodious fish-house, on the spot, may be made use of by persons disposed to put up fish extensively, and who bring barrels and salt for the purpose. A number of barrels, and a quantity of salt, may probably also be had at the fish-house. As the

at the mouth of Pohick Creek, on the same estate, is carried on this season by Mr. John Henderson, there will be the greater certainty that customers will not be disappointed in herrings, the two fisheries being near together: but country customers are cautioned not to come too early for herrings; as, of late years, they have several times done, and by returning home have missed of getting their supply, which afterwards was plentiful.

Gunston for Sale.

THIS elegant estate is situated on the Potomac, 16 miles below Alexandria—it is bounded on three sides by the Potomac and Pohick creek, and contains nearly 3,000 acres of land, level and fertile, to which are attached six shad and herring fisheries, two of which command the river channel. This land will be laid off in four tracts, so as to have one or more fisheries to each; these tracts will be again divided if requisite. This estate is level and beautifully situated, very fertile, and remarkably healthy. Plaister acts with an effect equal to that of any part of Virginia or Pennsylvania.—I have used 500 bushels in twelve months, and such is its beneficial operation, that were I to keep this land I should considerably increase the quantity. A manufacturing mill is distant about two miles, on a stream navigable for vessels carrying 1200 bushels of wheat, where the Baltimore and Dist. of Columbia prices are given for grain: being bounded on 3 sides by water, a small extent only of fence is necessary to inclose the whole: it would be admirably adapted to grazing. The improvements are a large and very substantial brick mansion, 40 by 70 feet, with every necessary outhouse, three commodious barns, houses for Negroes, and fish houses at each of the fisheries. 120,000 bricks and 1000 bushels of lime are just burnt on the premises. There is a considerable extent of live fence, both useful and ornamental, two orchards of well selected apples and peach, besides an abundance of other choice fruit. More than 150 acres are in clover, 200 in corn, and land is in preparation for sowing 250 bushels of small grain. Any quantity of hay can be cut from the low grounds, some of which (and all might,) have been reclaimed at a trifling expense. The river and creeks, abound with wild fowl, particularly canvass backs, the woods with deer and a variety of other game. Mules, cattle, highly improved sheep, farming utensels and household furniture can be had. The terms of sale will be accommodating. Property in any of the cities, negroes, bank stock, western lands, or lands near the Ridge, will be taken in payment.—Letters must be addressed to me at Pohick Church, Fairfax county, Virginia.

September 4 GEORGE MASON.

Valuable Property for Sale.

THE subscriber is desirious of selling a handsomely situated farm, on Hunting creek, in Fairfax county Virginia, adjoining the Mount Vernon estate and the lands of general Thomson Mason, four miles from Alexandria, containing about 240 acres, 80 of which are in wood—40 to 50 in thriving meadow of clover and timothy—a part of the residue recently seeded with wheat and rye, and clover, last spring—the whole enclosed with a new post and rail fence.—The improvements are, a comfortable and convenient frame dwelling house and kitchen, smoke house, poultry house, granary and stables.—There is on this place a rich and productive garden, and a large body of marsh meadow, from which may be saved annually 100 tons of hay, nearly as nutricious as the best timothy or clover.—With the farm would be sold a number of very valuable horses, cows and sheep; waggon, carts, and a variety of farming utensils and household and kitchen furniture; corn, oats and rye, and 40 tons hay. Also, adjoining the one above described, a farm containing 160 acres, recently enclosed, on which is a brick house, which a trifling expense would render comfortable. The soil is excellent, and a considerable part might be easily converted into meadow.—it would be sold with the other or separately. Also, a number of valuable servants, male and female. To prevent unnecessary application, he would observe, that they will only be sold to persons residing in the District or its vicinity, and not to be carried from it. The subscriber will also sell the greater part of his household furniture, which is new and handsome. For terms of all or any part of the above property, apply to NOBLET HERBERT, esq. or

Vaccine Institution.

THE small pox having appeared in Alexandria, such persons as have been vaccinated by the subscriber are invited to attend at his office, on St. Asaph-street, between Prince and Duke streets, to have their arms examined. Indigent persons are also invited to the same place for the purpose of being vaccinated. The subscriber will attend at his office every day in the week except Sunday, from 7 o'clock until 10 in the morning, for the purpose of receiving them.

He proposes also to be less particular than heretofore in the investigation of their claims to the benefit of the institution, as may respect their indigence and length of residence in town. The subscriber earnestly requests all such citizens as may be acquainted with persons liable to contagion, to send them without delay as above directed, where they will be served effectually and gratuitously.
